RANCHER KILLED WHEN SCRAPER TURNS OVER

When a road scraper which he was operating turned over and rolled down a steep embankment, Henry Berke, employed as a ranch hand on the Herbert Law place at Portola, was crushed and killed. Berke was driving a tractor behind which a scraper was being draged. In making a sharp turn the machine was thrown over and rolled down a 20-foot embankment.

The body of the man was removed to the funeral parlors of Layng & Tinney in this city, where an inquest will be held next week. Funeral services were held Tuesday, conducted by Rev. C. H. Stevens of Lodi. Interment was in Cypress Lawn cemetery.

The deceased was a native of Russia. He had been employed for the past six years on the ranch where he met his death.

U.S.W. VETS PLAN AUXILLARY HERE

Camp Riley, United Spanish War Veterans entertained a large delegation of veterans from Miles camp in San Francisco last week. A splendid feed was prepared and served the members and visitors in the Odd Fellows hall.

The next meeting of the local organization will be held in the Fire House, which will be the meeting place of the camp in the future.

Plans are now under way for the formation of a ladies auxiliary for the local camp. August 10th is the date set for the formation of the auxiliary, and Commander Bradley and his assistants are busy making arrangements for making this a memorable occasion. The Miles Camp Auxiliary drill team has been promised for the occasion and a good time is expected.

CONSTABLE'S SON IS ARRESTED YESTERDAY

Jimmie Wallace of South San Francisco, son of Constable Wallace of the first township, was served a warrant of arrest yesterday. The warrant was issued in this city at the request of Manuel Pavo, who claims that Wallace attacked him while he was standing on the sidewalk talking to friends. According to Pavo's story, the injuries received at that time have confined him to the hospital since the 26th of last month.

SCOUT CAMP READY TO OPEN WEDNESDAY

Preparations are complete for the opening of the Memorial Park training camp for Boy Scouts near Pescadero next Wednesday. The Scouts and their luggage will be furnished transportation to the camp. Scouts going to the park are asked to be ready to go at 8 o'clock and to meet at the S. P. station in this city. All scouts must have the official camp registration card with them in order to go. It has been requested that parents do not send candy or cake to the camp. Proper rashons are served by the camp and the health of the boys will be safeguarded by due regard for this rule. Mail for the scouts at the camp may be sent to San Mateo County Boy Scout Training Camp, Pescadero, California.

Scout Training Camp will be open for visitors on Saturday afternoon and evenings and evenings and Sundays only. A special camp fire program will be given each Saturday evening 7:00 to 9 p. m. Parents and friends are cordially invited to visit camp on these days. At other times the camp is ordinarly closed to visitors in order to avoid interference with the educatonal program.

Visitors should bring picnic lunches or camping outfits. The camp is not equipped to provide meals or sleeping accommodations for visitors, and there are no restaurants or resorts in this vicinity. There are excellent camping places nearby for those who wish to camp over the week-end.

Woman Accosted By Man, Draws Knife and Battles

When returning from the Pratt-Low cannery where she had been working, Mrs. Angela Rodriguez, a young woman of the Five Points section, was accosted in an insulting manner by a stranger. Mrs. Rodriguez had with her the knife with which she had been peeling fruit in the cannery. This she drew and gave the stranger a jab in the thigh which has confined him to the hospital.

The man, who gave his name as Norvarla, was given emergency treatment in the Redwood City hospital, where his wound was found to be a deep one. He will be more careful in the future. Mrs. Rodreguez was taken to the county jail by Officers McAuliffe and Woods and held on a technical charge of assault to commit murder until her story can be verified.

BROTHER OF LOCAL WOMAN PASSES AWAY

Dr. Joseph P. Bean, a brother of Mrs. Frank Boulware, passed away Thursday at the home of his sister at 11 Birch street this city. He had been in ill health for some time, and was brought to the Boulware home here two weeks ago.

Dr. Bean was a native of Maine and was 69 years old on the 29th of June. He was a physician with offices at 2235 Market street, San Francisco. He had been a resident of this state for the past 40 years. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Myra Parks Bean, a brother of Eban Bean of Santa Rosa and his sister, Mrs. Boulware of this city.

The funeral will be held at noon Monday at the Cypress Lawn crematory chapel by the James Crowe Company of this city.

CITY BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Osborn and daughter, Miss Neva Osborn, returned home Saturday from a motor trip through the northwest, which took them into several of the northern states and into the Yellowstone National Park. While away they visited their former home, Twin Falls, Idaho.

Rev. and Mrs. A. H. Clark and family spent Monday and Tuesday of this week visiting Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Winiger at their beautful summer home n La Honda. They were delighted to find such a charming spot so conveniently located to Redwood City.

The Rev. Carl Warner, District Superintendent of the Methodist Church, will hold the official quarterly conference Monday evening, August 2nd. All interested in the largest success of the local church are invited. This will probably be the last meeting with Doctor Warner before the annual conference.

A large number of local Masons visited San Jose Lodge No. 10 in San Jose Monday evening. The third degree of the order was conferred by the officers of Redwood City Lodge.

Mrs. D. P. Flynn and her pretty daughter, Miss Frances Flynn, are at Yosemite Valley enjoying an outing with the Knights of Columbus excursion. They will be in the valley for ten days.

Thursday evening many of the local Exchangites attended Charter Night of the recently organized Exchange Club in South San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Meyer spent a week in the southern part of the state, taking in all the places of interest. Last week they visited Mrs. Meyer's mother in Hayward and accompanied by their daughter, Eleanor, they visited friends in Sebastopol.

Mrs. Albert Meyer and Miss Eleanor Meyer left Wednesday to spend the remainder of their vacation period in Hayward visiting the mother of Mrs. Meyer.

Mr. and Mrs. L. N. McNeil are receiving the congratulations of their friends upon the birth Thursday morning of a nine-pound baby boy. This is the fourth child and the second boy in the family.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. O'Brien and son, Jack, returned Tuesday from Los Angeles, where they have been spending their vacation. They made the trip to and from the southern city on the S. S. Harvard.

Miss Clara M. Shelley, assistant librarian of the Redwood City library, is spending her vacation in San Francisco.

Rev. R. J. Currie, pastor of the Congregational church of this city, left this week for Montreal, Canada. He will join his wife in Canada and will remain there durng August.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Kalenorn and family have returned from a three weeks' trip to Oregon.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Extrom of Berkeley visited Mr. and Mrs. Miles Sharkey at their home on Whipple avenue.

Dr. W. H. Murphy is spending his vacation in a motr trip through the northern part of the state.

ENDORSES GOV. FRIEND RICHARDSON

Mrs. Geraldine Frisbie, one of the best known and most prominent club woman in the state, has come out strong for the reelection of Governor Friend W. Richardson. Mrs. Frisbie is a pioneer of San Mateo county and has always taken an interest in politics. She has served a term as state commander of the Relief Corps and has always taken a lively interest in the affairs of the grand army.

Here is what Mrs. Frisbie says about the governor:

Burlingame, Calif., July 28, 1926

Mr. D. E. O'Keefe,
Redwood City, California.

Dear Sir:

I was very much pleased to see in your valuable paper the picture of Governor Friend W. Richardson and the hearty indorsement for his re-election. He has been honest, faithful and efficient in the management of state affairs, economy has been his watchword, his promises have been fulfilled and no one can dispute the fact that his administration has been as he intended it should be, a business administration, strictly so.

I admre him for his sterling worth, courage and independence. This is the time for the Republican party to rally all its forces, prove its loyalty to Friend W. Richardson by again choosing him for governor. I shall do my part I assure you for I think he deserves the support of the whole party.

LAYNG & TINNEY TO MOVE INTO NEW HOME

The new funeral home of Layng & Tinney of this city will be occupied during the early part of the week. The new building is just being completed, and when finished will be one of the most modern establishments on the peninsula. The building represents an investment of more than $35,000.00.

The firm of Layng & Tinney has been established her for the past 16 years and has been located during that time at 68 Broadway. The development of the business, however, has made a larger location necessary, and they have erected their own establishment on Washington street.

A feature of the new building will be the conservatory chapel, where arrangements have been made to have one side of the room beautified with live growing plants.

WELL-KNOWN MARINER OF THIS CITY DEAD

Captain George Wallace, one of the best known shipping men of the Pacific coast, and for many years a resident of this city, passed away Monday at the home of his son, Captain John Wallace in San Francisco. The aged seaman was taken sick at his home on Roosevelt avenue on Friday and was taken to the home of his son, for care.

Captain Wallace was 80 years of age. A few months ago his 80th birthday was celebrated by a large number of his friends in San Francisco. The party was given at the home of his son and was attended by the leading navigators of the coast.

The captain was a native of Maine and followed the sea since boyhood. Both he and his son were masters of the old O'Brien ship J. B. Walker, a painting of which adorns the walls of the marine forum of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce. The elder Wallace took command of the J. B. Walker not long after she slid down the ways of the famous yards at Thomaston, Me., in 1879, and the son growing up with him at sea, assumed command of the ship when his father became a bar pilot at San Francisco more than thirty years ago.

Makes Fast Passage

The first voyage of the J. B. Walker from Loverpool to the Golden Gate via Valparaiso, has often been set down as a record passage. From the English channel to the West Coast port the ship logged 68 days, and from Valparaiso to the San Francisco bar she was but 54 days. Another feat credited to the J. B. Walker was a round voyage between San Francisco and Liverpool, which she negotiated in eight months and twelve days, carrying wheat out and returning home with coal.

Sold to the Sewalls

For many years the J. B. Walker plied in the Cape Horn and China trades. Her last voyage was from Antioch to Boston during the Spanish American war, when she carried a cargo of coal for the government. She was then purchased by the Sewalls and returned to the East Coast, where eventually she met the fate of all those gallant ships of sail that escaped doom on the deep—that of a barge.

Captain George Wallace had command of the J. B. Walker from 1879 to 1893, when he was appointed a San Francisco bar pilot. His son, John, then took her, and continued in command until he, too, became a bar pilot. Before taking command of the J. B. Walker, the elder Wallace was master of the ship, Edward O'Brien, one of the famous O'Brien fleet, which comprised more than a score of fine wind-jammers. His earlier commands included the schooners, Billow and J. R. Bodwell.

The captain is survived by his widow, Mrs. Marietta Wallace and a son, Captain Wallace, present port admiral of the Golden Gate ar pilots. Mrs. Stanley Wood, wife of Police Officer Wood of this city, is a granddaughter of the aged navigator.

Funeral services were held in San Francisco Wednesday from the family residence on Balboa avenue.

STUDIO BABY CONTEST WINNERS GET PRIZES

Marjory Penez, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Penez, was the winner of first prize in the baby contest held last week by Mason Studios. The prize was a $17 order of photographs, and the little girl was photographed wearing a pair of colonial glasses and leaning on the opthelmometer used by her father.

Alice Gurley was winner of the second prize, $10 in cash, and Lois Pence and Paul Nelson received third and fourth prizes, $5 and $2.50 in cash, respectively. Clifford Boren was the winner of the fifth prize, an enlarged photograph.

The judges for the contest were Mrs. Maurice Cooper, John Layng and Otis M. Carrington. A fine group of babies was assembled and the judges found it difficult to make their decisions. The pictures will be shown at the Sequoia Theatre tonight.

Bandit Tanko Sends Threat To Chief Collins

Joseph Tanko, wanted for a long list of crimes, who escaped from San Quintin more than a year ago and who with Floyd Hall, since recaptured, spread terror throughout this section of the state, is again the center of interest. The revival of interest in the case of Tanko, who has not been heard of for a year was suddenly revived Thursday when Chief of Police Collins of this city received a telegram from Oakland. The telegram read, "Chief of Police, Redwood City. Am still alive and mean business. I am coming to get you. Joe Tanko."

Whether the telegram is what it purports to be, or whether it is a hoax remains to be determined. Collins immediately after the reception of the threatening message traced the wire to Oakland, where he found the message was sent at 1:40 p. m. The police of the east bay region are now investigating the matter and developments are expected which will throw light in the identity of the sender of the mystery message.

Tanko, with Floyd Hall, was arrested and convicted of the murder of Chief of Police Arthur Meeghan of San Bruno. The pair was sent to San Quentin from which place they managed an escape. Following the escape from prison the pair committed a series of crimes throughout the state, ranging from burglary to the murder of a Sacramento policeman. Hall was subsequently captured in Sacramento, and sentenced to hang. Tanko, after the capture of Hall slipped from view and has not been heard of since, unless the message received by Collins proves to be genuine.

In the meantime the local policious characters and are ready should the escaped convict come to town to carry out the threat conveyed in the message.

FIREMEN PAY DEBT OF LONG STANDING TO POLICE OFFICERS

The local firemen may not be up to the police department in playing basketball, but they are good loosers and know how to pay a debt. This was proved Tuesday when the firemen acted as hosts to the local coppers at a feed at the Cafe de Paris. The feed was one to have been given by the loosers in a basket ball tournament between the police and fire departments several months ago in which the "bobbies" came out victorious.

The firemen at first suggested that the feed be given at at hot dog stand, but at the suggestion of the winning team a more elaborate repast was arranged and the police force enjoyed a real feed at the expense of the firemen.

LAW ENFORCEMENT MEETING PLANNED

Plans have been completed this week for a great mass meeting to be held at the Methodist church on Brewster avenue and Broadway on Tuesday evening in the interest of law enforcement. The meeting is to be held under the auspices of the Flying Squadron Foundation.

Hon. Oliver Wayne Stewart of Chicago, Illinois, editor of the National Enquirer and former member of the Illinois legislature, will be the speaker of the evening. Stewart is one of the founders of the Flying Squadron Foundation and is one of the oldest living speakers engaged in this line of endeavor. He has devoted his life to the interest of temperance and law enforcement and is an eloquent speaker.

Donald L. Bogie, a member of the faculty of the Sequoia Union High School, will act as chairman of the evening. The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock and free to the public.

DEER SEASON OPENS AUG. 1

The season for hunting and shooting deer opens tomorrow under most favorable auspices as the mountains and hills of the county are fairly well supplied with the fleet-footed animal. The Halfmoon Bay Gun Club, one of the largest in the county, will establish its camp in the deer rection today. District Attorney Franklin Swart and Assessor D. P. Flynn leave today for the camp. Among the members of the organization are Andrew Gilcrest, Charles Cavalli, Thomas Johnston and other prominent coast-side residents. The deer are plentiful in the mountain region and some good sport is anticipated by the hunters.

TO ENLARGE ABSTRACT OFFICE

The George H. Rice Abstract Company will receive bids today for the construction of an addition to the present building of the company. The addition will be to the rear of the present structure and will probably cost in the neighborhood of $20,00. It is planned by C. M. Doxsee, the manager of the concern, to convert the front of the building into an office including private apartments and have the new portion for a workshop or a place where all the abstract work may be done. It is to be up to date in every particular. The contract for the proposed work may be awarded next week.

RADIO

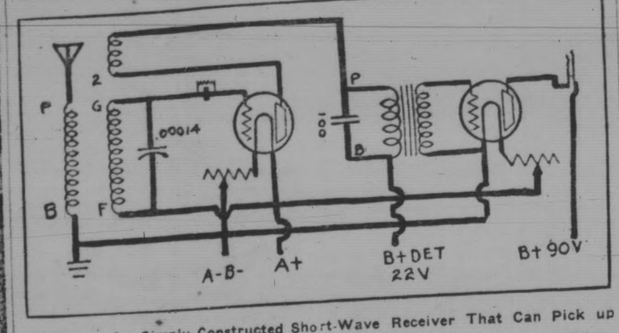

Diagram of a Simply Constructed Short-Wave Receiver That Can Pick up Programs Under 150 Meters.

By LEO HUGO KRUGER,
In the Chicago Evening Post.

If you haven't been listening to KDKA regularly (I mean by direct broadcast) then you are missing something. Of course a lot of folks have heard about short waves, but very few have ever listened to a program broadcast on short waves. (I mean direct, not rebroadcast.) KDKA has been offering some real programs the last few months, and if you are the kind of fan that likes to reach out for DX every night and you are willing to build a radio set just to be able to hear one DX station any time it is on the air, and also without the customary static read on.

All that is necessary is to construct a two-tube set, which should not cost more than $15. The diagram clearly explains the different connections. The main parts are the B.-T. old-style short wave tuner and the .00014 Karras, straight-line frequency condenser. The rest can be made up from odds in the old junk box.

Ranges From 50 to 150 Meters.

Stations should come around 25 or 30, using the Karras condenser (an old-style .00025 condenser can be used), but KDKA comes in close to the end of the dial, somewhere between 4 and 10.

After the set works well another stage may be added. But two tubes should be sufficient to put KDKA on the loud speaker. The set has a range for 50 to 150 meters.

Between 50 and 75 there is a lot of code, this is the amateurs' own 80-meter band, and when one knows the code it is nothing new when you should happen to hear one amateur talking to another 7,000 miles away.

Long Aerial Not Essential.

One more word about the set: A long aerial is not essential. I've picked up KDKA without either aerial or ground, but I recommend for the best all-around use about 65 feet. If your aerial is too long you might hear harmonics from local stations, but by putting a .00025 fixed condenser in series with the aerial the harmonics should become very weak.

Also, if the loud speaker or phone tips are reversed a steady ticking will be heard.

The list of parts needed:

One short-wave tuner, B.-T. old style.
One .00014 straight line frequency condenser.
One .00025 fixed condenser.
One grid leak.
Two 25-ohm rheostats (amperite may be substituted in last stage).
One .001 fixed condenser.
One 4-to-1 ratio, or higher, audio transformer.
One single-circuit jack.
Two 201A UV or UX tubes.
Two sockets.

The panel may be 7 by 14 inches and the baseboard should be of practically the same measurements.

How Condenser, Choke Circuit Helps Music

Loud-speaker reproduction may often be improved by introducing a choke coil and high-capacity condenser in the output circuit of the radio receiver.

The method of connecting is quite simple. The choke coil, which should have an inductance value between 50 and 100 henrys, is connected across the output terminals of the receiving set. One terminal of the loud speaker is connected to a terminal of the choke. The other connection to the speaker connects to one side of the high-capacity condenser, which should have a value of four microfarads. The second terminal of the condenser connects to the other connection to the choke coil. In reality, the condenser and loud speaker are connected in series with each other and in parallel with the choke coil.

A in the diagram shows the usual method of connecting the loud speaker. B shows the loud speaker connected in the circuit, using a condenser choke coil output system.

In addition to improving the quality of reproduction, such a device facilitates the use of higher plate voltage on the plates of the audio-frequency amplifier tubes.

Its purpose is to allow the direct current applied to the plates to pass through the choke coil, and the alternating current or modulated signals to pass through the loud speaker. Incidentally, this arrangement will insure against burning out of the loud speaker.

The choke coil used should be capable of passing a current of at least thirty milliamperes.

Hints on Testing of Wet and Dry Batteries

Never test a "B" battery with an ammeter. You may ruin the ammeter and you will certainly shorten the life of the battery by subjecting it to so heavy a current output. Placing an ammeter across a battery is the same as short-circuiting it with a wire. Use a voltmeter.

To test dry cells you may use an ammeter for just an instant. The cell should show at least 25 amperes if it's in good shape. The voltmeter should show full 1½ volts, even if the battery be badly shelf-worn. Never use the ammeter if you can help it and then only for a fraction of a second, and use it only on large dry cells meant for "A" battery work.

For the storage battery, the only test of any real value is that made by a hydrometer. It shows the gravity of the liquid (electrolyte) and tells the exact point between "full charge" and "dead battery."

Only a "high resistance" voltmeter is useful to test the voltage at which vacuum tubes are lighted.

Fixed Resistance and Condensers Aid Quality

With certain audio amplifying transformers the connection across the secondaries of fixed resistors of about 250,000 or 500,000 ohms value works wonders in clarifying reception in general and in reducing the exaggeration of high notes. Fixed condensers of .0005 or 001 mfd. in the same position have a similar effect, while combinations of condensers and resistors often turn a hitherto poor amplifier into a fairly acceptable one.

Resistance and condensers so employed are not infallible cures for distortion due to bad amplifier construction or design, but in many cases they bring about enough improvement to warrant their cost and installation.

Improve Regeneration

A choke coil having about 120 turns wound on a one-inch diameter tube and connected in series with the plate circuit of a regenerative receiver often will make the set oscillate more easily and steadily.

Recharge Dry Cell

To recharge a dry cell, bore two holes one-fourth inch in diameter and three inches deep on opposite sides of the center connection. Then fill the holes with cider vinegar and plug up with paraffin.

Radio Motion Pictures Not an Impossibility

Moving pictures synchronized with music or speech distributed by radio are forecast as a development of the near future in a speech given recently before the Electric Light association convention at Atlantic City, N. J., by David Sarnoff, vice president of the Radio Corporation of America. The speaker said that transmission of moving, talking pictures presents no problem, other than speeding up the process of transmitting still pictures.

"We will soon transmit," he said, "not only the sound of voices and instruments but the sight of action as well. The next application of sound recording and reproduction devices will be to the theater, concert hall, moving picture houses and other places of entertainment. Selections played by the finest orchestras and the greatest musicians of our time will be made available in the form of records or films which can be synchronized with the movements on the screen or platform. The combined effects will be as available to the poorest dweller in the smallest hamlet, as to the richest resident in the metropolitan city."

Mr. Sarnoff opposes introduction of the European system of government-controlled stations with taxes levied on the listener. An idea of the size of radio audiences was given when he said that the superpower station at Round Brook, N. J., had a normal audience of 5,000,000 persons with that number tripled for unusual programs.

Hint on 199 Tubes

If you want to use 199 tubes with a six-volt 120-ampere-hour "A" battery, try putting a 50-ohm rheostat in the negative lead to cut down the voltage. Then include the usual rheostats on the side of the lead opposite the battery connection.

The KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

We measure success by accumulation. The measure is false. The true measure is appreciation. He who loves most has most.—Vandyke.

A COLLECTION OF CAKES

Cakes are always in season and the farder is never quite complete unless there is a cake for an emergency.

White Fruit Cake.—Cream two-thirds of a cupful of butter until creamy and add gradually, beating constantly, seven-eighths of a cupful of pastry flour, sifted with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of soda, then add one-half tablespoonful of lemon juice. Beat the whites of six eggs until stiff, using an egg whip, add gradually one and one-fourth cupfuls of powdered sugar. Combine mixtures and when well blended add two-thirds of a cupful of candied cherries, one-third of a cupful of blanched and shredded almonds, one-half cupful of citron and one teaspoonful of lemon extract. Bake in a moderate oven one hour.

Old-Fashioned Pound Cake.—Cream one cupful of butter and add gradually one and two-thirds cupfuls of granulated sugar, beating until creamy; add five eggs, one at a time, beating vigorously between the addition of each. When the mixture is foamy fold in two cupfuls of pastry flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in a slow oven.

Six Months' Cake.—Mix one-half cupful of butter with one cupful of sugar; when creamy add two well-beaten eggs and one-half cupful of molasses. Mix and sift two and one-half cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoonful of cloves and the same of mace. Add alternately with one-half cupful of milk to the first mixture and beat vigorously, then add one cupful of raisins cut into small pieces and dredged with two tablespoonfuls of flour. Turn into two bread pans and bake in a moderate oven forty-five minutes.

When baking pie prepare and bake another shell. This if kept in a cold place will be crisp and good for several days. Fill with crushed berries mixed with sugar and top with whipped cream. Such a dessert is quickly prepared and is especially well liked.

Cherry Ice Cream.—Use a cupful of rich cherry juice and a pint of cream with a few drops of almond extract. Sweeten to taste and freeze as usual. Serve in sherbet cups and garnish with a cherry or a spoonful of the minced cherries and some of the sirup.

Inviting Dishes.

A most delicious filling for cake is prepared as follows: Bake two cupfuls of sugar with four tablespoonfuls of water until it threads; pour over three well-beaten egg whites, add one-half cupful of citron shredded fine, one-half cupful each of chopped raisins and blanched almonds and the same of figs. Spread between the layers and on top of the cake.

Layer Prune Cake.—Take one cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of finely chopped cooked prunes, one-half cupful of prune juice, one-half teaspoonful of soda dissolved in the prune juice, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and nutmeg and one-half teaspoonful of cloves. Mix in order given, adding two cupfuls of flour sifted with the dry ingredients. Bake in two layers about thirty minutes. Ice with one cupful of powdered sugar, three tablespoonfuls of butter and cream to spread.

Fruit Salad.—Cut into small pieces two cupfuls of celery, two oranges, two-thirds of a cupful of raisins seeded and plumped over steam, one cupful of grated apple and a cupful of mayonnaise dressing. Cover the salad with the apple, then the mayonnaise.

One-Piece Dish.—Arrange a layer of thinly sliced uncooked potatoes in a baking dish, season well, add a layer of thinly sliced onion and cover with lamb chops. Bake until all are cooked. Serve from the baking dish. Peas may be substituted for the onion if preferred.

Fruit Salad Dressing.—Take one-fourth of a cupful of pineapple juice, one-fourth of a cupful of orange juice, one teaspoonful of acid phosphate, three teaspoonfuls of water, two eggs, one-half cupful each of whipped cream and sugar. Beat the eggs, add the sugar, heat the fruit juices with the phosphate, add the hot mixture to the eggs, cook over hot water until it coats the spoon. This makes a pint of dressing.

Chicken Salad.—Cook a chicken with a lean piece of veal until both are tender. Cut up into small cubes, add twice as much celery as chicken, a half cupful of finely cut blanched almonds and any good highly seasoned salad dressing.

A few spoonfuls of leftover oatmeal may be stirred into the morning griddle cakes or muffins, or it may be fried and served with bacon as a breakfast dish.

DESIGNS FOR LATE SUMMER; ALLURING CHIFFON FROCKS

THE two-piece mode—youthful and practical as it is, has taken the world of fashion by storm. It is as popular as bobbed hair and almost as varied as millinery. All that designers have to do, to maintain interest in the two-piece frock until the end of summer, is to think up new tricks of decoration or unusual and beautiful color management or novel fabric combinations.

In the altogether charming two-piece dress shown here, the note of novelty appears in the combination of printed crepe and cut-out linen. In which the dress portion is made of the figured crepe with bandings of plain crepe. The printed silk adds one more to the myriad dotted patterns, in dots that vary in shades of one color and are arranged in a plaid pattern with some of the dots centered by smaller ones. The skirt has four wide plaits across the front and two at each side, and the plain crepe banding is in the color of the dot. There are many color combinations that would be attractive in this dress, as grey green blue or red dots on a white ground. The banding at the top of the plaits is novel and has the effect of shortening the skirt. The linen jacket is bound at the bottom with the dotted crepe and has a belt of it across the back. The collar and cuffs combine dotted and plain crepe and the novel tie is made of cord covered with the plain crepe. Down each side of the pockets are small pearl buttons, set close together and the front of the jacket has a narrow binding of plain crepe. This pretty frock has more than novelty to recommend it for it is an elegant affair, in every way chic and dainty. This effect might be ruined by the wrong choice in footwear, but it is enhanced by white silk hose and white kid slippers of fashionable cut. They make a footwear outfit that proves unexcelled with summer frocks.

Now that midsummer is here, the fluttering type of frock grows popular, with cape backs, wings, scarfs, panels, sashes and tiers coquetting with every little vagrant breeze that blows. In colors green, white and black combinations and all white are the coolest looking, but even in red the sheer fabrics worn look cool and many chanel red frocks in georgette are shown for late summer.

When the talk is of chiffon frocks it is to be taken for granted that it includes those made of georgette, since these exquisite, twin-sister fabrics are so much alike that what is said about one is true of the other. Midsummer brings them into full-bloom in gowns that float through afternoons and evenings and are as decorative as flowers. There is a craze for delicate materials and dark, plain colors in tailored styles, or light colors in sports styles are liable to be encountered at any time of day when hot weather arrives.

A Novel Fabric Combination.

Just one more of those pretty, printed chiffon frocks that prove so flattering to their wearers has had its picture made for the benefit of those who wish to liven up their wardrobes with something new for midsummer. One glance shows its fitness for whatever the afternoon or evening may bring to pass in the way of entertainment. These joyous printed patterns in georgette or chiffon rarely employ trimming, but occasionally a plain color, matching some color in the printed pattern, is used in bandings and sometimes a little lace is adroitly introduced in their construction. Quite a number of models incorporate the cape and its modifications, as a part of the ensemble, and often it is cleverly managed to partly cover the arms. In the gown pictured the debonaire cavalier cape is detachable and has flat ties made of the chiffon. The frock has a long bodice and a full rippled skirt. Its new feature is the wide, crushed girdle, also made of the chiffon and fastening at the left side.

A Dainty Frock of Chiffon.

Comparatively few frocks are short-sleeved, but wing treatments and capes that extend over the arms and terminate at the sides of the bodice are rivals of the long-sleeved modes. Many neck lines are "V" shaped and very new collars are convertible—that is, they are high at the back and form revers when open at the front. But they are edged with a narrow flat fold that is extended into long tie ends, so they may be turned up about the throat with the ties wound once about the neck.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

Narrow Belt Buckles in Back

The belts used to mark the waist line of the newer frocks for daytime are usually narrow, of self material and many have buckles in the back. A buckle of silver and black enamel is one novelty exhibited, while black suede with silver buckle is popular.

Exaggerated Size

Necks Are High

The smart foulard and taffeta bathing suits, worn over wool jersey tights, are nearly all high-necked, at least in front. If they are cut away at any point it is in the back. Even the one-piece knitted suits fail to reveal any great amount of throat and shoulder epidermis.

And in All Colors

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

Julius Caesar

"NOW that you have me in your power you would be wiser to kill me than to hold me for ransom."

"Why?" asked the puzzled pirate captain.

"Because," laughed the prisoner, "when I am free I shall return and kill you."

The young man who thus jested with death was small, bald and of harsh, aquiline features. He was Caius Julius Caesar, a Roman of high rank, exiled from his home city. He had fallen into the hands of Cilician pirates and his attendants had gone to seek his ransom. When they came back with it he promptly armed a fleet, returned to the place of his captivity, overcame and crucified the pirates, according to his promise.

Rome, being a republic, was for centuries swayed by two contending factions—the Patricians and the Plebeians. In the early part of the last century B. C., the city had passed under the dictation of one Sulla, whose political rival was Marius, Caesar's uncle by marriage. Sulla drove Caesar from Rome and kept him out of the city for years, during which period of exile the young man proceeded to perfect himself as a soldier, a writer, a statesman and an orator. He was destined to make marvelous use, later, of all these accomplishments.

On Sulla's death Caesar returned to Rome, receiving high office in the state. He spent the next twelve years in building up the welfare of the plain people, whose fortunes were at low ebb, and in trying to heal civil disputes and secure equality for all Roman citizens. This course made him tremendously popular with the people, even while his extravagance plunged him deep into debt. At the age of forty he formed a triumvirate (triple alliance) with two famous men, Pompey and Crassus, by which the three were virtually to share among them the sovereign power of Rome. Caesar, in the division of offices, was made governor of northern Italy, Gaul (France and Switzerland) and the Alps.

This office was no sinecure, for the provinces were swarming with insurgent tribes. For the next eight years he was constantly on the battlefield; often fighting in the front rank like a common soldier; little by little subduing all Rome's Gallic foes. He conquered Gaul, hurled the Germans back over the Rhine and made that river a Roman boundary; crossed into Britain, and, after one repulse, conquered the country that is now England; then, as Gaul again rose in a mighty confederacy of revolution, he crushed the uprising and stemmed the tide of barbarism which would otherwise have swept over the Alps and overwhelmed Rome.

He kept a chronicle of his campaigns which, as "Caesar's Commentaries," has endured for nearly 2,000 years as the foremost Latin textbook for schools and a model of literary style.

Crassus died and Pompey and Caesar quarreled, thus breaking up the triumvirate. Pompey's party was in power in Rome. To weaken the great general who was becoming the people's idol, the senate, at Pompey's order, deprived Caesar of office, ordering him to give up his command at once and to return home, under penalty of a treason charge. Caesar had two courses open to him—either to obey meekly and to lose all he had gained, or to defy the order and thus render himself liable to death as an enemy to Rome. The river Rubicon divided his Gallic province from Italy. Should he cross that river under arms it would be an act of open war against Pompey.

Caesar did not hesitate. With his legion of veterans he crossed the Rubicon, thus irrevocably committing himself as Pompey's foe. Pompey, having no army sufficient to cope with him, fled, leaving the field clear to his victorious rival. Caesar, after making himself master of the Italian peninsula, returned in triumph to Rome, where he was hailed as dictator. Pompey raised an army in the East, but was beaten by Caesar (who met him with a far smaller force) and soon afterwards was murdered. Pharnaces, Asian king of Pontus, next defied Rome, and Caesar subdued him in one brief campaign, sending home this still briefer report of the victory: "I came, I saw, I conquered!"

A later conquest of Spain made Caesar master of nearly all the world. He ruled Rome justly.

But ambition wrecked him as it had many another great man. Having conquered the world he longed to be king. Rome hated the idea of a king. Mark Antony, Caesar's friend, publicly pressed royal honors on him. The people stood mute. Caesar, quick to feel the public puise, refused the crown.

A faction rose against him, working secretly for fear of the populace. Its ringleaders, Cassius, Casca, Cimber and other demagogues and political schemers, lured Marcus Brutus, Caesar's best friend, into the conspiracy under pretext that national welfare demanded Caesar's death. In the senate, March 15, 44 B. C., the conspirators fell upon Caesar and assassinated him.

Rome's old-world greatness was due to Caesar more than to any other man.

Spoonful of Birds

A naturalist who had hatched out a clutch of eggs of the minute humming-birds of South America was at a loss for a means of bringing home to people who did not know them the extreme smallness of these creatures. Eventually he hit upon the idea of placing the fledglings in an ordinary teaspoon and began to focus his camera. Suddenly the mother bird returned, and promptly settled down in the spoon to keep the young ones warm.

HERE is one subject which ld be of pre-eminent concern people of America these days. breakdown of respect for law failure of the courts to cope with organized crime. The members of the American Bar association recognize this and made it the chief topic of discussion at their annual meeting in Denver. President Chester I. Long of Wichita, Kan., in his opening address declared that the courts are helpless and futile and that the slogan of the lawyers should be "Slow down the legislatures and speed up the courts." He pictures justice as not only blindfolded but handcuffed and put in a straitjacket by too many laws and antiquated procedure. Said he:

"The public has lost faith in the efficacy of the courts and their results in the enforcement of the criminal law. Crimes of violence have become so frequent that in several states certain classes of citizens have taken into their hands the protection of their lives and property. This is true of bankers. It is the greatest reflection on our courts."

Mayor Dever of Chicago, one of the principal speakers, advocated an unprejudiced, scientific investigation of the facts of prohibition, at the direction of congress and conducted by a commission above suspicion. He declared the liquor question is not settled and that the recent inquiry by a senate subcommittee was worthless. He said that, after six years of Volsteadism, such appalling phenomena cluster around the liquor question that it is impossible to get good government in the large cities. He said that laws to regulate ordinary human conduct were regarded by many exemplary folks as "tyrannical intrusion" on personal rights and that it was an "impossible task" to obtain respect for such laws.

The national crime commission's subcommittee on criminal procedure and judicial administration, headed by Herbert S. Hadley of St. Louis, submitted to the bar association the results of its six months of study. It holds that the law gives too much advantage to the criminal, and to correct this situation the committee recommends drastic changes in the "archaic, cumbersome and ineffective criminal procedure that now obtains in a majority of our states."

Among its recommendations, twenty in number, is one that would weaken the tenet that a man is presumed innocent until proved guilty. Another urges alteration of the unanimous jury rule so that ten men on a jury of twelve could bring about conviction in felony cases, except murder, and five on a jury of six for trial of misdemeanors.

ALL records for speed in circling the earth were smashed when Linton Wells and E. S. Evans reached the Pulitzer building in New York Wednesday afternoon just 28 days, 14 hours, 36 minutes and 51 seconds from the time when they started on their dash eastward. They used seventeen airplanes, three special trains, two liners and many small boats, automobiles, a jinricksha, a droshky and their feet—seven modes of conveyance. They met with no accidents but had many thrilling experiences, especially in flying over mountain ranges. The travelers agree that the thing that has impressed them most is the backwardness of aviation in the United States as compared with Europe. They comment, too, on the remarkably cordial reception and efficient help given them by the Russians.

DICTATORS are becoming common in the old world. Just recently two more of them—dictators at least so far as financial matters are concerned—were created. One of them, as an innovation, is a king already. Albert of Belgium was given by the chamber practically unlimited powers to try to solve the country's financial problems which are made evident in the rapidly rising cost of living and the fall of the Belgian franc. Premier Jaspar, asking the chamber for this action, scored the "citizens without consciences" for their campaign against the national currency. He continued:

"Nothing justifies the uneasiness of our population. Never have we had so few unemployed. Antwerp has recovered full activity. Our crops are bountiful and agricultural production is worthy our industrial production. The budget is balanced, thanks to economy, and no new taxes will be needed on this score. It is only for dealing with the financial problem and food supplies we ask these powers."

M. Caillaux is France's financial dictator, and he has made a good start by running over to London and signing, with Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, the definite arrangement for funding the French debt to Great Britain. The scale of yearly payments is that proposed last August. The so-called safeguard clause, which France wishes incorporated in the agreement with America, provides that if Germany defaults in its reparation payments to France, the latter country will be entitled to ask for reconsideration of the terms in the light of all circumstances then prevailing.

THIRTEEN men, including six members of the Turkish parliament, were hanged on the waterfront at Smyrna for conspiracy to assassinate President Kemal Pasha. All protested their innocence. The trial of the condemned men, who were charged with plotting the death of Kemal Pasha on his arrival at Smyrna on June 18 last, disclosed that the very existence of the new Turkish republic was threatened by the plotters.

BASTILLE day in Paris was the occasion for a great military parade with all the splendor of the days before the war. The guests of honor were Moulay Youssef, sultan of Morocco who is the protege of France, and Gen. Primo de Rivera, dictator of Spain. Communists and other liberals did not like these two autocrats and expressed their feeling by hissing, for which a lot of them were clubbed by the police and locked up. In other respects it was a big day for the people of Paris. In an interview Dictator de Rivera warmly defended his rule in Spain and declared the recent abortive rebellion did not amount to anything. Generals Weyler and Aguilera, leaders of that revolt, frankly admit their part in the plot and maintain that what they did or attempted was constitutional, since their attack was not against the king, but against the dictator who, they assert, represents neither the king nor the country.

CHICAGO entertained another great host last week—the members of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks in national convention. Fully 150,000 of them, from all parts of the land, were present and they had a joyous time, besides dedicating the beautiful building which is both a memorial to the Elks who died in the war and the national headquarters of the order. Amusements of all kinds were provided, including parades, dances, competitive drills and a fine balloon race. Charles H. Grakelow of Philadelphia was elected grand exalted ruler and Cincinnati was awarded the next convention.

SIXTY-FOUR banks in Georgia and the Bankers' Trust company, the operating company for 120 banks in the state, have closed their doors, the action being due to the appointment of a receiver for the trust company. The receivership was granted on the petition of the Bank of Umatilla, Fla., which alleged the trust company had obtained $491,500 from the Umatilla bank to be placed on investment.

SAN FRANCISCO will benefit immensely from the action taken last week by fourteen of the city's wealthiest men whose combined fortunes are more than $100,000,000. Led by C. W. Merrill, W. H. Crocker, Mortimer Fleischacker, Paul Shoup and Clay Miller, these men formed a foundation under which billions of the surplus wealth of their families will be donated to the benefit of the community. Each will make specific gifts for specific purposes and a self-perpetuating board of trustees will handle the bequests after the donor's death.

JOHN W. WEEKS, former senator and secretary of war in the cabinet of Presidents Harding and Coolidge, died at Lancaster, N. H., after a long illness. He was an able and loyal citizen and an unusually competent public official.

Another man taken by death last week whose name was familiar to all was Lincoln J. Carter, writer of popular melodramas and inventor of much stage machinery.

Savona has been in turmoil for some time and Dupanloup's arrest followed a series of incidents in which five court workers were hurt.

The local press says the Fascist party intends to go the limit in crushing movements such as Dupanloup's, and has determined that petty squabbles must be forgotten in order that all the nation's energy may be concentrated on solving national problems.

A "psychological demobilization" of the Italian people has been ordered by Premier Mussolini as a means of convincing the world of Italy's peaceful intentions. This was revealed by a government spokesman, who explained that the premier had directed the newspapers to cease publishing incendiary material tending to keep alive "the bellicose terminology and spirit."

SHOW HIM THE DOOR

WHEN the next door neighbor calls at your home to say "hello" and meet the family and be sociable, you're glad to have him.

When he calls at the office on your busy day, helps himself to a chair, pulls open your desk drawers and snoops in your correspondence—

When he makes himself acquainted with your bank balance, takes stock of your trade and concludes his visit by telling you how to run your business, you're ustified in being a little bit resentful.

And furthermore, you may be excused if you show the visitor to the door and tell him not to hurry back; that you'll continue to run your own business in your own way and at your own risk!

So it might be well if Senator Borah of Idaho reconsidered his decision to make California's business his business at the forth-coming election.

We've elected our State officials in the past without outside advice and we're discerning enough to judge a man by his record. We know we've had service from Senator Shortridge and we'll see to it that we get more service by returning him to office.

Of course if Senator Borah still insists upon messing in our private affairs, we can show him the way home.

But to save us the trouble, we'd politely suggest that he stay there in the first place!

TWO STRIKING TRIBUTES

THE active part played by United States Senator Samuel M. Shortridge in bringing about the passage of the immigration restriction act, with the Japanese exclusion clause, is being emphasized in the Senator's campaign for the Republican nomination to succeed himself in the Senate.

Two striking tributes to Senator Shortridge for this work are in the possession of the Shortridge campaign headquarters in the Crocker building, San Francisco. One is a letter from V. S. McClatchy of Sacramento, one of the leaders in the fight, and the other a letter to the Senator from Representative Albert Johnson, chairman of the House committee on immigration and naturalization. McClatchy's letter says, in part:

"I realize that the position and opportunity enoyed by you in this matter were exceptional and that your standing with the Executive and with certain departments, as well as with your colleagues of the Senate, enabled you to perform a service which could not have been rendered by others. I know, too, how well that service was rendered.

"It is a duty and a pleasure to acknowledge on behalf of the state organization which I have represented the debt which state and nation owe you in this matter and I shall not hesitate to bear witness thereto when occasion offers."

Representative Johnson wrote:

"Now that the President has signed the immigration restriction, with complete Oriental exclusion, for which so many of us have worked all these long years, I feel that I should extend to you my sincere thanks for the big part taken by you in the passage of this measure. I am very sure that without your earnest and active support we should never have succeeded."

VOTE FOR ECONOMY

GOVERNOR F. W. RICHAIDSON is to be re-elected on his economical and business-like administration. The taxpayer knows what he has saved for the people and he is going to vote for a continuance of this practice of economy.

His drastic economy budgets and strict practice of economy has caused no deterioration in the state service. Efficient business methods have improved the service in every department. The educational, progressive, humane, protective and charitable functions of the state have been fully supported and encouraged. The needs of the state hospitals, reform schools, homes for defectives, blind and deaf schools and state's prisons have been provided for generously. Six million dollars is now being expended for new construction in various state institutions, being three times as much as any previous budget. The allotments for education have been the largest in the history of the state. All the needs of the teachers' colleges have been adequately met and personal attention has been paid to the needs and business of the university.

A vote for Richardson is a vote for economy and business in the affairs of the state.

KEEP UP THE GOOD WORK

PIONEERS have toiled to found schools, to bring system out of chaos, to protect children with compulsory education laws, etc. Every one of these advances has been opposed. The arguments that are now used against the Curtis-Reed Education Bill, now pending in Congress were marshaled against them. They won because they were right, as the Education Bill is right. They won because citizens worked for them, year in and year out, in the name of childhood and civic duty and opportunity. The call now is for men and women who believe in childhood and the schools and who are willing to work actively for the Education Bill until victory is won. Are you doing your share?—Selected.

FIRST STEPS TAKEN TOWARD SAN CARLOS BELMONT EXCHANGE

The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company are now making the first steps towards the establishment of the new San Carlos-Belmont Exchange. The installation of the necessary equipment in the new building at San Carlos has begun and the total project when completed will represent an expenditure of $66,000.

The work provides for the installation of switchboard and associated equipment, which will cost $12,000 and the placing of outside aerial and distribution cables at a cost of $54,000. In the latter part of this project eight miles of aerial cable, containing from 50 to 400 pairs of wires, are to be placed, which in turn necessitates the installation of 131 cables.

This cable is to be distributed in the following manner. A 400 pair cable together with distributing cables are to be placed throughout San Carlos and a 200 pair cable will be extended from the Devonshire Tract on up to the Belle Monti Tract. In addition a 100 pair cable will be placed along the county road between San Carlos and Belmont which will provide service for the town of Belmont. It is also proposed to extend a 400 pair cable south of San Carlos to service the San Carlos Addition, Oak Park and White Oak Park. This cable will provide the necessary facilities to furnish service for these tracts as soon as they are developed.

According to J. D. Worthington, manager here, the project will be completed, the equipment installed and the new exchange established September 1st.

"This work, said Worthington, "is an emphatic indication of the Pacifc Telephone and Telegraph Company's confdence in the future rapid expansion of this district and the surrounding territory."

"A Hero of the Big Snows," the Warner picture starring Rin-Tin-Tin and coming to the Sequoia Theatre next Wednesday & Thursday, August 4-5, is truly a "dog picture." There are more animal players than humans, and these canine actors and actresses are seeking laurels in the picture world.

Rinty and his mate Nanette are the stars, there is a clever and carefully trained dog team and a wolf pack as well in the roles of extras.

Herman Raymaker directed this Ewart Adamson story, which is said to be the famous dog star's most thrilling production. Alice Calhoun has the leading feminine role. Don Alvarado is the hero, Leo Willis the villian, and Mary Jane Milliken, the baby sister.

COLORFUL CROWD OF ORIENTALS IN NEW CHANEY FILM

Malays, half-castes, mulattoes and Orientals mingled in one of the strangest assemblages gathered at even a screen studio, for the filming of "The Road to Mandalay," Lon Chaney's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle coming next Monday and Tuesday, August 2-3, to the Sequoia Theatre. It is a vivid drama of Singapore, Mandalay, and the Bengal Bay region, with Chaney in the role of "Singapore Joe," weird and sinister ruler of the Singapore underworld. Probably every race on earth was represented in the crowd scenes in the big production.

Tod Browning, who produced "The Unholy Three" and "The Black Bird," both starring Chaney, has directed "The Road to Mandalay" from a story written by himself and Herman J. Mankiewicz.

WOODSIDE FIRE DEPARTMENT TO MEET SAN CARLOS

The Woodside Fire department will meet the San Carlos firemen on the Woodside diamond in a fast and furious baseball game Sunday afternoon at 2:30. The Woodside men were defeated by the Redwood City firemen last week and have made up their minds to retrieve their lost honor by pounding the San Carlos baseballers. A good game is expected The following are filling positions in the- Woodside team: catchers, Harry Williamson and Bill O'Neil; pitchers, "Kick" Hallett and "Irish" O'Neil; 1st base, B. Beck; 2nd base, Tom Shine; 3rd base, Floyd Kelly and Frank Coelho; short stop, "Peggy" O'Neil; right field, Russell Clay, Al Perpoli; center, "Frenchy" Bonifant; John Volpiano; left field, Andy Moller and Emmet O'Neil.

The game last Sunday ended in defeat for the Woodside team at the hands of the Redwood City men by a score of 13 to 3. This game was also played on the Woodside grounds and was well attended.

PESCADERO RESIDENT DIES IN MILLS HOSPITAL

Eli Moore, the well-known resident of Pescadero, is quite ill at Mills Memorial hospital. His sickness is alarming his many friends. Mr. Moore is the oldest Native Son in the state, having been born in Santa Cruz in 1847, and was therefore born under the Mexican flag. The treaty of peace between Mexico and the United States did not take place until February 2, 1848 and the state remained under Mexican rule until the following July. Mr. Moore moved with his parents to Pescadero as a youngster and there he has resided practically all his life. He has been prominent in the affairs of Pescadero Parlor Native Sons for a number of years. At every recurring Ninth of September celebration Mr. Moore always has a prominent place in the parade. Mr. Moore is liked and loved by all. He is well posted on the early history of San Mateo and Santa Cruz counties.

THIS is addressed to you. It is personal — but not confidential. Its purpose is to urge you to start a SAVINGS ACCOUNT.

Savings Deposits are the financial "back bone" of every community. When people save money it means that they are looking ahead — are not only preparing for the future, but also preparing a real character building habit.

Savings Deposits have a great deal to do with prosperity. In every community, an increase in Savings Deposits means that more money is available for first mortgage loans on real estate — either in city or country.

A growing Savings Account is good for you—and good for the community.

Public Utilities—including hydro electric companies—are under strict regulation in California.

Rates are fixed and service is supervised by a State Commission.

Rates are based on cost of service, which means cost of materials, cost of labor, cost of money and taxes.

Rates in California are low.

Service is a model for the rest of the United States.

Since 1913 the average per capita cost of living increased 65%, while the average cost of electricity decreased 8%.

The bridge rocked and swayed to their struggle, bucking under them as the flood lifted it, only to let it sag again, and swirled about their feet, tugging viciously at the structure, tearing at the cables, thrusting at the cliffs. Their feet slipped on the wet planks, they fell against the hand-rope and the slanting suspension stays, clutching frantically with one hand, striking with the other, giving blows that left each sick with pain, desperate, ignoring the peril, clinging and sliding while they fought, silent save for their heavy breathing and the grunts with which a blow was delivered or received.

Baxter fought foul as his strength sapped from him. Caleb was harder, deeper-lunged, better muscled for this rough and tumble game. He hammered Baxter over the kidneys and Baxter gasped with the pain, his face contorting while he hung like a dead weight to his opponent, faint with anguish. When it passed he flung up his knee and caught Caleb in the groin, temporarily evening things. He broke free and lashed out, right and left, flailing at Caleb's head and jaw as the latter crouched against an angle of the hand rope and a stay, covering up. Then, with an energy summoned from his reserves, Caleb rushed, landing hard above the heart. Baxter staggered, groped forward and flung an arm about Caleb's neck, dragging with all his weight while Baxter strove for balance. His fingers found Caleb's throat, and worked desperately in shutting off breath, torturing as they pressed upon the jugular.

As they clung, athwart the planks now, Baxter's weight almost unbearable in the crook of Caleb's arm, his body stretched out down stream with the force of the water, the eastern buttress shuddered, tottered, slid; plunging into the gut. It toppled sideways, shaking the bridge as a terrier shakes a rat, dragging it until the cables sang above the noise of the torrent and then, anchored by sunken ledge and crevice, jammed hard. It held firm, the cables still secure. The sudden jar, the lowered pitch, was too much for Baxter. The blow over the heart had finished his endurance. His fingers lost their grip on Caleb's throat, the furious water claimed him. His despairing clutch on Caleb's smooth slicker failed. He gave a cry, his face ghastly in the white light of the moon and slid into the current like a hog.

Caleb snatched him by the collar of his coat and shifted his armhold for a grip on a saving stanchion as they both straightened out in the imperious sweep of the maddened creek. He thought his arm would be torn from its socket with the strain and he managed to wrap his legs about the planks, shouting at Baxter, yelling his loudest. Unless Baxter helped to save himself, or Caleb let loose of him, another moment would see them both whirled down the gut, over and over, their lungs filled with water, battered, drowned!

"Get hold of yourself," Caleb yelled. "Baxter! Get a grip on something, hang on to me. Haul yourself up. Quick!"

The insistent words and the will behind them worked in Baxter's numb brain and roused him to a last flurrying fight for life. With a frantic effort he clawed at Caleb, twining his fingers in the slicker and slowly dragged himself up from the suction of the flood. Caleb got both hands to the stanchion, praying that it might hold. Baxter found the opposite one, then the hand-rope, and so crawled to safety, releasing Caleb from his dead weight. He began to hitch himself up the incline while Caleb lay for the moment slack, utterly exhausted, his breath coming in great gasps, the fibers of his muscles seeming to be torn apart, his sinews racked. He got to his knees at last and then to his feet. The bridge might collapse at any second, there was no time to lose. Baxter collapsed again from weakness, face down on the planks where they still showed above the ever-rising, furious water.

Caleb got an arm about him. With the help of the hand-rope he hauled Baxter along until they reached the solid cliff of the western side of the gut. The blood was pounding in his brain with his efforts and it seemed as if someone was calling to him. He stood, leaning against a tree—Baxter seated on a ledge, his face in his hands, elbows on knees—and faced the creek and the broken bridge, breathing in great gulps of cool air. The call came plainly now, no fiction of his dizzy brain.

Reined upon the verge where the cliff buttress had broken loose, was Betty Clinton on her pinto pony, the forelegs of the snorting horse braced against danger. The moon was free of scud and the girl's face was clearly visible. She had no hat and her chestnut hair was in disorder.

"How long had she been there?" Caleb wondered while he strove to catch what she was saying above the tumult of the creek. He heard his name. She recognized him, with his slicker torn, his face bloody. And she had hailed him in preference to Baxter! Baxter had come from the ranch. Yet, she had called to the man she had snubbed—in her trouble, for there was trouble, he gathered, as she repeated her words in a high voice that came clearly now and then when wind and water favored.

"Mr. Warner! My father—is—ill! I have—sent—word—by Padilla—by the road. A doctor—Luis—may—not—get one. Will—you? The bridge!"

"I'll get one," Caleb shouted back. She heard him and nodded to tell him so. He turned to Baxter.

"Hear what she said? I've got to get a doctor. Are you all right to leave?" Baxter lifted his face. It was sullen with hate.

"D—n you, yes," he answered. "Leave me alone."

Caleb looked across the gut before he took to the trail. He saw Betty Clinton deftly wheeling her pony. It was dark as pitch as he got well into the canyon where the growth was thick. But he forged ahead in the darkness, puzzling a little as to why she had not called Baxter. Had she ridden to overtake him, knowing he had gone that way. Had she seen the fight, seen Caleb rescue his opponent, perhaps thought Baxter too weak for her purpose—or did she take sides with Caleb, in some flash of intuition?

Whatever the real reason, his hopes spurred him down the uncertain path on his errand, charged with new energy by the appeal of Betty Clinton. He came out upon the plain panting but with his second wind gained, crunching through gravel, plowing through the alkali soil at a steady jog until at last he pounded over the Coyote creek bridge and gained the hotel, asking the astonished landlord where the nearest doctor lived, and so on again down the road for half a mile to find the physician in and commandeer his services.

"Clinton? Clinton of El Nido? Have you come from there? What's the trouble?"

"I can't tell you. Not an accident, I'm sure, or Miss Clinton would have said so. The bridge at the canyon head was down. We had to shout across. She's sent a man by the road but she was afraid he might not be able to get a doctor. She just said he was ill."

"Ah! I see. He'll have gone to Paloma. There's Conklin there. And he's got a lot of influenza. Road's pretty bad after the storm, but we'll get there. Going back with me?"

Caleb wanted to go back. He might be of use. He had done what she asked, he was entitled to her thanks, at least.

Only the Rutted Road Showed There Had Been a Storm.

"I'll go," he said.

"Come on." The doctor had picked up his bag and led the way to his little garage.

The sky had cleared completely and the night was fair as they chugged out to the road and shot down toward the highway that would take them to Paloma and so, by a sideroad, to the valley. Caleb fancied that Baxter would come out of the canyon all right. Not that he greatly cared. But some of the enmity had gone out of him.

The air was cool, bright stars glittered all about the soaring moon. Only the rutted road showed that there had been a storm. At last they struck the well-drained highway and sped along the metaled road at top speed, past the scattering light of Paloma to labor valiantly up the hill that led to Hermanos valley and drop down to the ranch.

There was a car standing by the house.

"Looks as if they'd got Conklin," said the doctor as he honked his horn and braked to a standstill. "Don't look like his car, though."

It was Baxter's roadster. Why he should have left it there and started for the canyon in the storm, again perplexed Caleb. A sudden thought struck him with the possibility that he might have quarreled with Betty Clinton. That would account for her not asking his aid. He had lied when he said he kissed her. Baxter would do that. Or the kiss might have been forced, and he dismissed.

"You've come at last. What is it?"

They were getting out of the car, the doctor reaching back for his bag.

"It is Warner, Miss Clinton. I've brought Doctor . . . ?"

"Doctor Kennedy, Miss Clinton."

"Oh!" There was relief in her tone. "I'm so glad you've come. He's in a high fever. I'm afraid . . ."

Caleb followed them as they walked swiftly toward the open door. She had thanked him only by a glance that held its reward and conveyed something that encouraged him to wait in the big living-room. There might be something else that he could do. He still puzzled over the presence of Baxter's machine outside, the riddle of Baxter, walking down the canyon. It all seemed to point to a quarrel. Mary Morgan's suggestion that Betty Clinton had not believed him as bad as he was painted grew more likely, this service that he had rendered her might help to renew the bond between them.

He was still in the dark as to the nature of Clinton's illness, or its seriousness, and no one came to enlighten him until the honk of a horn sounded outside.

Betty Clinton did not answer this arrival. Instead Maria entered from the patio pergola, ushering in a brisk, short man with a bag.

"I'm Doctor Conklin," said the man to Caleb who had risen. "You are a friend of the family? I don't think I've met you before."

"I brought Doctor Kennedy up from Coyote," said Caleb. "Miss Clinton feared Padilla might not be able to secure you. It is too bad that there is not a telephone here or we might have saved you the trip. I understand you have plenty to do in Paloma."

The doctor did not appear aggrieved that he had come to play second fiddle, that he might not be wanted.

"Kennedy, eh? Good man, Kennedy! Yes, we have a mild epidemic. I must be going back as soon as possible. But there's no harm done. The Mexican told me about Clinton. Exposure—low vitality—danger of pneumonia."

Maria came back and went into the patio. Her eyes turned toward Caleb. He fancied them friendly. Betty Clinton was close behind her.

"I am so glad you came, doctor," she said, advancing with outstretched hand. "So is Doctor Kennedy. He wants to consult with you. Will you go in?"

She accompanied him to the inner door and then came back to Caleb. Her face was pale and worried but her eyes were shining as she gave him her hand.

"I haven't thanked you yet," she said. "There isn't time just now. But I appreciate what you have done. It was—kind. You can wait?"

"Surely," he answered, stirred by her touch and voice. She had barely disappeared when Maria arrived with coffee and sandwiches that she set on a table.

"La senorita wishes you to eat," she said, with the effect of an absolute order. Caleb thanked her.

"Did you see—that other one?" she asked. "My senorita did not say, save that she met you by the bridge."

Fighting Smallpox in Central Africa

Smallpox is a terrible plague when it breaks out, as it does, among the native in Central Africa. There is one small woman over there, Miss Tessie Williams (who recently visited the United Christian Missionary society's headquarters here, being employed by this board), who is doing her best to make Africa smallpox-proof. She vaccinated 646 natives in one day, considering it a very good missionary stunt. Her method of describing it was like the assembling of fabulous numbers of autos as witnessed in a well known factory. They stood in a line an eighth of a mile long. One native administered the soapsuds, scrubbing the arm clean; another scraped the skin, ready for the inoculation; a third kept the young missionary supplied with apparatus. Nothing but sleeveless costumes are worn in that part of Africa, and, despite the hurry of it, there were no infections or other ill effects.—Detroit Free Press.

Craw in a Tattie Field

There was recently appointed to a country parish church a young minister who, although a clever chap, is very much attracted to his "paper" during his sermon.

This failing of his does not find favor with a few of his congregation, and the other Sunday, as a few of them were going home from church, one of them, the village schoolmaster, remarked: "That was a very scholarly address we got today from the minister. Don't you think so, Mr. Blunt?"

"Humph!" replied Mr. Blunt, a plain old farmer. "He jist minded me o' a craw in a tattie field; twa dabs an' a look up!"—Toronto Globe.

That Kind of a Mind

Mark Twain hated to have his work edited. On one occasion he sat down to write to a man who had criticized his work. He was first inclined to think, "the idea! This long-eared animal, this literary kangaroo, this illiterate hostler, with his skull full of axle grease," etc., but restrained himself and pointed out to the man h's errors "in gentleness and in the unwounding language of persuasion." "It is discouraging to try to penetrate a mind like yours," he finally wrote. "You ought to get it out and dance on it. That would take some of the rigidity out of it. And you ought to use it sometimes. That would help. If you had done this every now and then through life, it wouldn't have petrified."—Pathfinder.

Historic Cave

The story relating to the Judges' cave in New Haven, Conn., is that in 1661, Goffe and Whalley, two of the members of the high court in England which had condemned Charles I to death, used this location as a temporary refuge from the officers of Charles II. It seems that the bowlder was split in such a way as to form a small cave. Although certain of the townspeople were aware of their presence in the locality, they were afraid to give them any practical assistance.

Miller Huggins Has Yanks in Lead

Manager Miller Huggins.

A year ago when the Yankees were headed nowhere in the American league and were battling to remain out of the basement, one man was blamed for the tremendous flop and that man was Miller Huggins.

Today the Yankees are at the top of the junior circuit and stand an excellent chance to hang on to that precious position, but in the comments on the form reversal one hears nothing about the same Miller Huggins, who has continued as the pint-sized manager of the Yanks.

Fails to Inspire Praise.

Huggins probably would be the most tragic figure in baseball if he believed one-tenth of the diatribes directed against him. As it is he fails to inspire praise and offers an excellent target whenever anything goes wrong.

A man who has managed a team winning three pennants and a world's series in three years might be expected to draw the plaudits of a hero. But not Huggins. The attitude of sports writers and the general public seemed to be that the Yankees were victorious in spite of Huggins rather than because of him.

And last year's debacle seemed to confirm the impression that the Yanks as a team depended wholly upon the antics of Babe Ruth and that any bush-leaguer could make more of a success than Huggins.

Ruppert Has Confidence.

This, as said before, is another year. Colonel Ruppert, the genial owner of the Yankees, always has had oceans of confidence in "Hug" and this confidence appears well placed.

A great deal of the 1926 success of the Yankees certainly must be laid to Ruth's reformation. But aside from the great slugger the New Yorkers have a powerful team and one wonders if Huggins shouldn't receive some of the glory.

BASEBALL NOTES

• • •

Joe Bush, veteran pitcher, was given his unconditional release by the Washington club.

• • •

• • •

Who remembers when Amos Strunk used to play the outfield for a different team each spring?

• • •

Charley Ross couldn't have been much harder to find if he had been a good second baseman.

• • •

Walter Kimmick, utility infielder of the Philadelphia Nationals, was given his unconditional release.

• • •

Women are now admitted free to all games of the Los Angeles baseball club held at Wrigley field.

• • •

"Yes," remarked the fleet shortstop as he dashed out into left after the high fly, "that's me all over."

• • •

John Clancy, first sacker, now with Little Rock in the Southern, will be recalled by the Sox at the end of the season.

• • •

Frankie Camilli, who made quite a reputation as a heavyweight boxer, is being tried out as a shortstop by San Francisco.

• • •

Claude Jonnard, right-hand pitcher, has been obtained by the Milwaukee club of the American association from the St. Louis club of the American league.

• • •

Contrary to general belief, baseball players cannot eat excessively at their club's expense. Members of the New York Giants are allowed only $4 per day for meals.

• • •

Pitcher Alex Ferguson, a right-hander, has been sent by the Washington American league club to the Buffalo Internationals in exchange for Outfielder Danny Taylor.

• • •

George (Duffy) Lewis, former star outfielder for the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees, has signed to play in the outfield with the Jersey City club of the International league.

• • •

Emory Rigney, Tiger castoff, but now shortstopping for the lowly Red Sox, is playing his usual brilliant game afield. Rigney always could cover the position in an acceptable manner.

• • •

"Bruno" Betzel, who plays second base for the Louisville club, is named after six uncles who are all Methodist ministers. His full name is Christian Albert Fred John Henry William Betzel.

• • •

Young Ed Walsh of Meriden, who is a student at Notre Dame, will when the time arrives to enter the big leagues, sign with the White Sox, where his dad played the hero role for many years.

• • •

Toronto has gone wild over its women's baseball games, thousands watching the contests which are held every evening.

• • •

• • •

Arthur Hans, a pitcher for a Kansas City semi-professional ball team, has been signed by George McQuillan, manager of the Columbus club of the American association.

No Weak Pitchers Ever Face Backstop Deberry

It is not often that a ball player pleads for more work. He may ask for more money, more food, more rest and surprise no one, but the other day Hank Deberry, the always-wise and often witty catcher of the Brooklyn team, came forth with the statement that he wanted to work more often.

"Last year I caught about fifty games," he said. "Thirty-two of those were games in which Vance pitched, and when Daz pitches you can always find the best men on the other club pitching, too. Consequently in more than half the games I played I had to bat against the best pitchers in the league. I'd like a chance once in a while to fatten my batting average on some of the easy ones."

There seems logic in Hank's argument, but the fact remains that he will continue to catch when Vance is in the box, for Vance and Deberry are as closely allied as ham and eggs or salt and pepper.

Athletics Favorites in Betting on Wall Street

The New York Giants and Philadelphia Athletics have been installed favorites in the forthcoming major league pennant races by Wall street.

One firm of betting commissioners reported general wagers at odds of 8 to 5 against the chances of these two teams.

The world's champion Pittsburgh Pirates and the Washington Nationals, American league title-holders, ruled second choices in the wagers placed by the same firm. The odds were 9 to 5 against in each case.

The Yankees were quoted at 2½ to 1 in the wagering, which was said to be on an unusually heavy scale with $10,000 placed by one firm alone.

Blake Going Fine

Pitcher Blake, more popularly known as the "Sheriff," has been pitching fine ball for the Chicago Cubs this season, and there is every reason to believe that he will soon be regarded as one of the stars of the National league.

Sign Army-Navy Contract

The contract awarding Chicago next fall's Army-Navy game was formally signed by officials of the United States Naval academy and representatives of Chicago. The contract provides for a stadium capable of seating 100,000 spectators. The naval and military academies will receive 40,000 tickets each, the remaining 20,000 to be publicly sold in Chicago. The cost of transportation, meals and accommodations for the regiment of midshipmen is guaranteed.

HURLERS SPEEDIER THAN AMOS RUSIE

Never at Any Time Had the Speed of Johnson.

Clark Griffith, in the course of a talk on fast ball pitching, made the interesting assertion that Amos Rusie never at any time had the speed of Johnson. He went further and declared there never have been half a dozen pitchers with more speed than the old-time Giant.

"There is a general but wrong belief," said Griff, "that Rusie was exceptionally fast. He was fast, all right, good and fast, but it's a joke to compare his speed with Johnson's. What Rusie did have was the fastest curve ball ever pitched and the best curve, but his curve was as swift as his fast ball. That's what gave the impression of his having unusual speed.

"He got so he had great control of that curve and then he became a great pitcher. I've seen him at three and nothing, then hook three fast ones over. As a speedy pitcher, however, he hadn't as fast a ball as Johnson, Bill Donovan, Joe Wood, Ed Crane or Dazzy Vance.

"Johnson is the fastest of them all, and the next fastest was Bill Donovan. Jouett Meekin was wonderfully fast and speedier than Rusie. But nobody ever equaled Johnson's speed of ten years ago."

Amos Rusie as He Appears Today.

Millions for Interest

The United States government paid out more than $1,000,000,000 interest on the public debt during 1926, says the Dearborn Independent. The greatest amount in one year was $1,055,088,000, paid in 1923. This year the estimated interest payment is $730,000,000.

Facts Everyone Should Know About Shoes

MOST of us who have feet wear shoes. And to most of us a pair of shoes is a pair of shoes. If we can get them over our feet and if they suit our taste, we buy them and forget it—that is, as soon as they allow us to forget them. And then if we can't forget them, if they hurt and make us unnecessarily aware of the fact that we have something on our feet, then something is wrong. And often it is more serious than we may think. Ill-fitting shoes can do permanent damage, as many of us can testify. How can we tell, then, just what kind of footwear to adopt?

Ethelwyn Dodson of the University of California college of agriculture has made a thorough study of feet and shoes. The results of this survey were incorporated in a circular for use in shoe demonstrations given throughout California by a lecturer of the extension service of the university. The purpose of this work is to aid in developing healthy, normal feet for infants and growing boys and girls, and to maintain good feet for adults. Read the following and see how much there is to know about our pedal extremities:

The Normal Foot.

The foot is a flexible structure consisting of 26 bones held together by muscles and ligaments in the form of a springy arch supported by the heel at one end and the ball of the foot at the other. This is known as the longitudinal arch. Across the ball of the foot is another arch known as the anterior arch. Note: There is no normal type of arch. The height and shape are of no value in determining the usefulness of the foot. The number of high, medium, and low arches found in normal feet is practically the same as found in feet with weakened arches.

Infants.

A. Develop ient and Care of Feet:

1. Develop good bone structure and muscle tone through proper nutrition. Note: Bow legs are an evidence of rickets. The poor muscular and skeletal development of a flabby baby rather than the overdevelopment and over use of the legs and feet is often the cause of bow legs. (Direct sunshine, cod liver oil and raw egg yolks properly used are recognized cures for rickets.)

2. Rest feet during the morning as well as during the afternoon. Overfatigue hinders muscular development.

3. Allow infant to begin walking only when ready of his own accord. The bones and muscles are still weak and may be injured by too much work.

4. Do not allow a young child to walk beyond his strength.

5. Allow infant to walk barefooted when conditions are favorable.

6. Allow infant to walk naturally, toes straight ahead.

7. Bathe and dry feet thoroughly every day. Trim toe nails straight across to avoid ingrowing nails.

B. Stockings:

1. Wear no stockings or bootees unless for warmth.

2. Have stockings or bootees large enough for free toe actions, one-half inch longer than foot.

3. Discard stockings which crowd toes.

4. Select cotton stockings unless in a very cold climate, when wool is preferable.

C. Shoes:

1. Wear no shoes until ready to walk.

2. Select soft-soled pliable shoes shaped like natural outline of baby's foot. Avoid slippers.

3. Select shoe with roomy toe—a moccasin type is good. A shoe may have the correct shape, length and width, but yet crowd the toes, due to a skimpy upper.

4. Have shoe one inch longer than foot and one-quarter inch wider; it is better to be too long than too short.

5. If heel rubs, pad the counter by gluing in fitted pieces of chamois skin.

6. Patent leather shoes or slippers retard the evaporation of moisture from the feet.

Growing Girls and Boys Ages Two to Eighteen Years.

A. Care of Feet:

1. Develop good bone structure and muscle tone through proper nutrition.

2. Go barefooted whenever possible.

3. Toe straight ahead when walking. Toeing out weakens the ankles and arches and hinders speeding in walking.

4. Examine feet for spots caused by rubbing or pressure, and for toe crowding. Judge shoes and stockings accordingly.

5. Use foot brush with daily foot bath. This promotes circulation.

6. Trim toe nails straight across and flush with ends of toes.

7. Care should be taken to keep child from overtaxing feet during convalescence from any disease, children's diseases as well as others. Weakened muscles put greater strain on ligaments, resulting in flat feet.

8. Rest feet during day; overfatigue weakens the feet.

B. Stockings:

1. Select stockings one-half inch longer than foot. Avoid tight garters.

2. Discard stockings which crowd toes.

C. Shoes:

1. Have foot measured, weight bearing, every time new shoes are purchased.

2. Have child stand barefooted on a piece of paper and draw outline of foot. Cut this out. Compare with shape, length and width of shoes being purchased. Fig. 7 shows correct size and shape. Fig. 8 shows incorrect size.

3. Secure shoes shaped like the foot with full upper allowing toe freedom. (Fig. 7.)

4. Have shoes fitted one inch longer than foot. The width should be one-quarter inch wider than foot until the twelfth year, then the same as the foot.

5. Select shoes with flexible soles. Avoid stiff hard soles.

6. Avoid too heavy shoes for small boys as well as girls. The extra weight gives too much additional work for the leg muscles and is a cause of fatigue.

7. Select low shoes to develop strong ankles and to insure free foot circulation.

8. Select oxfords or barefoot sandals rather than slippers. Avoid slippers which press down the flesh along the upper edge, as shown by the bulging of the flesh above.

9. Patent leather slippers retard evaporation of the moisture from the feet.

10. Heels: Secure spring heels as long as they can be obtained, at least until the eighth year; then broad, low heels not over one-half to three-quarter inch for the growing child with one inch maximum for the high-school girl or boy.

Note: Under the direction of an orthopedic physician, some foot deformities may be corrected by alteration of the heel.

11. Avoid high heels. The foot is thrown in an unnatural position by high heels, which causes the ligaments and muscles to be stretched, lessening the elasticity of the arches and weakening the foot. (Fig. 2.) High heels retard efficiency in walking.

12. Keep shoes in repair. Air at night. Use shoe trees. Dry slowly when wet. Keep polished.

Adults.

A. Care of Feet:

1. Provide the best type of shoe for the foot during the working hours.

2. Avoid high heels for working hours. Secure comfortable height.

3. Discard shoes which are making trouble and are uncomfortable.

4. Toe straight ahead when walking. Toeing out weakens the arch.

5. Avoid unnecessary use of feet in standing and walking. Sit at work whenever possible.

6. Rest feet during the day.

Note: A good way to rest tired feet during the day is to remove shoes and stockings and to lie on the bed with the legs at right angles to the body against the headboard of the bed or the wall.

7. Do not overtax feet during any abnormal physical condition, or during convalescence from an illness. The muscular and ligamentous support is diminished and if overworked may result in muscular atrophy and loss of muscle tone.

8. Avoid overweight. As the weight increases rapidly above normal, the ligaments and muscles of the feet do not increase in strength sufficiently to carry the extra weight.

9. Bathe feet daily with warm water and soap. Scrub thoroughly with foot brush to stimulate circulation. Feet may be toughened by soaking in salt water.

10. Trim toe nails straight across; file off rough edges with nail file.

B. Stockings: See notes on stockings under Growing Girls and Boys.

C. Shoes:

Select shoes which maintain good feet—any shoe which meets all the following requirements:

1. Straight inner line. Check by holding both shoes in the hands, soles up and inner edges together with heels and ball touching. Note the amount of divergence of the inner lines of the toes. The less the better for the great toe.

2. Broad roomy toe in sole and upper; no pressure from toe cap or seam. Compare with shape of foot. Fig. 4, shoe with good toe room; Fig. 1, crowded toe room.

3. Broad low heels, three-quarter inch to one and one-quarter inch. (Figs. 5, 6.) Rubber heels are satisfactory.

Note: The height depends upon what the foot has been accustomed to. In case heels are too high for comfort and efficiency the height should be reduced gradually and proper foot exercises taken.

4. Low cut shoe permits free use of ankle and free circulation. (Figs. 5 and 6.)

5. Correct length and width. Have feet measured, weight bearing, each time shoes are purchased. The length should be one inch longer than the foot. The width not more than one-quarter inch narrower.

Note: Flexible shanks allow free action of arch muscles. They are good for healthy, normal feet. Sick feet with weak or broken arches need the advice of an orthopedic physician or competent surgeon.

Draining Lake for Land

The Bulgarian government is drying up Yambel lake in order to make more room for the refugee village of Atolovo. Work is already under way and soon the lake bottom will be turned into fertile fields. Six millions of leva (a lev is 19.3 cents) have been appropriated by the government to construct homes and enable the refugees to establish themselves. Atolovo village was named for a Bulgarian philanthropist who was instrumental in caring for thousands of refugee children.

Jackie Was Lonesome

Jackie is a manly little fellow living on Eastern avenue. Sometimes when his mother has a business errand she has an older boy named Estel stay with him and Jackie apparently has taken a great liking to him, for a few days ago he said:

"Mother, won't you go away again so Estel can come to stay with me?"—Indianapolis News.

Why He Went

Jones—Is the cashier in?

Boss—No; he's gone away.

Jones—Ah. For a rest, I presume?

Boss—No. To avoid arrest.—Good Hardware.

Physicians Stand High on Roll of Martyrs

Since the time when the "black death" swept through Europe, physicians have sacrificed themselves to the cause of public health and safety, according to Hygeia Magazine. Reed, Carroll and Lazear were lost in the fight against yellow fever; Ricketts and McClintic succumbed to typhus and to Rocky Mountain fever; Brazy lost his eyesight from secondary infection during an operation; others have suffered terrible mutilations while investigating the X-rays.

A complete list can never be assembled because so many have passed without the recognition of the world, giving their lives silently in the routine performance of their duties.

Give Credit to Norse

While the discovery of Nova Scotia is credited to Cabot, on whose reports in 1497 were based the English claim of right of possession of the continent, according to well-founded data the credit for its discovery should properly be to that hardy band of Norse mariners, who, under the leadership of Eric the Red, visited Cape Sable island in 994, fully 500 years before Cabot's visit, says the Halifax Marining Chronicle.

It is not thought, however, that the Norsemen explored the mainland to any extent, if at all.

Monarch of Small Realm

Another king has died and his passing was scarcely noted. He was Love Pritchard, eight-four years old, reigning Monarch of Bardsley island, southwest of Carnarvourshire, since 1911, when he succeeded John II, who abdicated. At one time the inhabitants of Barsley island numbered 100, but they gradually dwindled to 40 and last year King Pritchard and his subjects abandoned the island and moved to the mainland.

Mystery of Mackerel

The mystery of the mackerel is being investigated by the bureau of fisheries. It has long been known that mackerel mysteriously appear and disappear, making it difficult for fishermen to locate them. Hence the hauls are erratic. Now the bureau is making a study of the mackerel's movements and migration.

Meadow Larks Halt Train

Meadow larks have appeared in the vicinity of Glenwood City in such numbers that the local Soo line freight train was obliged to stop a few miles west of there to avoid running over hundreds of the birds on the track.—Milwaukee Journal.

GERMS—6,000,000 germs on a single fly, says a noted health officer. Protect your family with Flit.

Flit spray clears your home in a few minutes of disease-bearing flies and mosquitoes. It is clean, safe and easy to use.

Kills All Household Insects

Flit spray also destroys bed bugs, roaches and ants. It searches out the cracks and crevices where they hide and breed, and destroys insects and their eggs. Spray Flit on your garments. Flit kills moths and their larvae which eat holes. Extensive tests showed that Flit spray did not stain the most delicate fabrics.

Flit is the result of exhaustive research by expert entomologists and chemists. It is harmless to mankind. Flit has replaced the old methods because it kills all the insects—and does it quickly.

Restore Stevenson Hut

Another bit of "south sea romance" has succumbed to the onward march of modernity. A few days ago the grass house on the famous beach of Waikiki, where Robert Louis Stevenson loafed and dreamed, and wove some of his best-known stories, was torn down. It would have been utterly lost had not a Salvation Army officer heard of the occurrence. He collected such of it as was usable and is having the house rebuilt on Salvation Army property in Manoa valley, an upland residence section of Honolulu. It will be restored as nearly as possible on the lines of the house where the immortal Scot lived.—Chicago Daily News.

Find Lost Comet

Ensor's comet, which was lost from view after it passed near the sun this year, was located again by two German astronomers. It was then of the thirteenth magnitude and invisible to the naked eye.

See Black Snake as Friend

When insects or rodents become so numerous as to seriously endanger crops, experts look around to see what natural enemy they can import to kill off the pest. The rapacious coyote having been largely eliminated, farmers who lived formerly in the Mississippi valley are seriously considering the importation of black snakes to war against the troublesome ground squirrels. Former Missouri residents believe the black snake would also exterminate the rattlesnake and largely rid this country of gophers.

Life's Many Phases

Some one has said that life is either a hope or a memory, and that does seem true. How very seldom do we see persons who are absolutely satisfied with their present condition! They are either planning for the future or recalling other days in their happiest moments, and the present seems to be only a place from which to look backward or forward.

Perhaps it is a good thing this is so, for effort is the soul of achievement, and while we may reach our longed-for goals, they should prove merely stepping stones to greater endeavor if we are to reach the highest peaks of success.—Contact Magazine.

They Have Four Eyes

Swamps hold many oddities. In the water you will find those whirligig beetles on the surface, says Nature Magazine. Do you know they have four eyes? They need them—confronted with the traffic situation that faces them. See how their legs are put on and perhaps you can account for the whirligig.

Use for Phonograph Needle

The discarded phonograph needle will do nicely to clean bottles, cruets, flower vases, etc. Fill receptacles with warm water, to which a little ammonia has been added. Let soak a few hours, then pour off about four-fifths of the water, drop in the old needles and shake until all the sediment disappears.

Earliest German Poetess

A nun named Hroswitha has been acclaimed the first poetess of Germany by historians. She flourished about 950-1000 A. D., and was an inmate of the Benedictine convent at Gandersheim, where she wrote legends, epigrams and dramas which carried her fame beyond the confines of her native country. The people of Gandersheim have set aside June 11-13 for special memorial exercises in her honor.

Motion Pictures Old Study

Motion pictures, while one of the newest of modern developments, are the basis of one of the oldest recorded studies. It is said that students in China and Egypt 5,000 years ago were trying in their own crude way to make animals move. In China, for instance, figures of animals were cut out of leather and moved before a lamp so that their shadows seemed to walk on the opposite wall. In Egypt a mirror and a hole in the wall of a dark room gave a more ingenious effect. The motion picture projector as it is known today, however, is about 35 years old.

To Absorb Ink Stains

One of the best methods of removing fresh ink from rugs is to apply ammonia. It should be rubbed lightly over the spot to be removed and this can be done by taking a soft cloth and saturating it with the solution. It will immediately absorb the ink.

Another Clerk Added To P. O.

Owing to the reclassification of the local postoffice, another clerk has been added to the staff of Postmaster Larrecou. At a recent civil service examination three took the test, two women and a man, Harry B. Jossel, who has been temporarily appointed to the position. If he passes the examination he will be given a permanent place in the office.

Main Approaches Under Way

Final stages n the construction of the new Dumbarton vehicular bridge over San Francisco Bay are now being entered upon. The third span is in place, and preparation of the main approaches is under way.

A fleet of trucks is engaged in transporting rock from the Stanford quarries to be used as a foundatiin for the hard surface of the approaches. The two approaches are practically five miles in length, and the steel span itself is slightly more than one mile long. The approach on the east side of the bay passes close to Newark, connecting with the main highways.

Completion of the Dumbarton bridge will make possible a convenient route between peninsula points and the East Bay cities. From the west side of the bridge road Willow road will lead to the Middlefield road and then to Menlo Park. It is expected that Willow road will be widened in order to accomlodate the expected increase in traffic.

Polo Field to be Opened Aug. 7

Takes Over Oil Station

A. L. Wilkerson has taken over the Associated Oil Station on the corner of the highway and Oak Grove avenue. He has been employed at the service station for some time. By a recent order of the Associated Oil Company, the stations throughout the state have been turned over to the employees of the concern for a period of three years to operate and maintain. The company hopes to get good results by this philanthropic method of assisting all its old workers. The company is determined to give the system a fair trial.

Celebrate Silver Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Danneberg celebrated their silver wedding last Sunday at their home in Felton, where Mr. Danneberg is the agent for the Southern Pacific railroad company. Over a quarter a century ago Mr. Danneberg was the assistant agent here and after his removal to Palo Alto married the fascinating belle of Redwood City, Miss Mattie Stelter. The couple have lived in happy companionship ever since. They are well remembered here. Among those attending the silver wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Towne of Redwood City, Miss Bertha Kuck of Menlo Park, Mrs. Hayden, formerly Maud Beeson, Mrs. Graves, formerly Miss Cecelia Hynding and others from this section.

Recovering Rapidly From Injuries

Robert Bruce Fredericks, who was run over by an automobile last Saturday night while on his way to the New Menlo Theatre, is recovering rapidly and will suffer no permanent injuries. The little fellow, with four companions, was crossing the highway near the thearte when an automobile approached. Robert cleared the road, but the others tried to pass the machine which swerved to the side to save the youngsters and struck young Fredericks who was standing on the sidewalk. The boy was taken to the Palo Alto hospital, where his injuries were given first aid. He suffered a slight fracture of the skull. The little fellow is to be confined to his home for some time.
